

and Bishops hitting the King, and Black could get in behind the pawns.

31.Qd2 Qc4 32.Qd1 Bc7 33.Bc5 Qd5
34.Kf1 Bd6 35.Qc1 Bf8 36.Ke1 Bg7
37.Qc3 Qg5 38.Qa5 Bf6 39.Qa8 Kg7

Due to time trouble these moves may be slightly out of sequence, but we won't try to analyse them. Black has still had the chance to safeguard the position of the King over the last few moves, and even here 39. ... Bd8 would still win. Possibly more good luck than planning that the Queen is on g5, but that happens.

40.Qf8 1-0

How could this tragedy be avoided? A couple of obvious answers - don't get into time trouble and be familiar with basic mating patterns.

Of course there's not much you can do after running short of time (and White's opening undoubtedly gained a bit of it) and recalling the patterns under stress is another matter. But even if you can't calculate all White's variations, you can see that with h7 (a white square) vacant it will be much harder to get mated.

Another point that might be noted is Black's indecision about whether to put up the shutters to move 40 or to try to play normal moves.

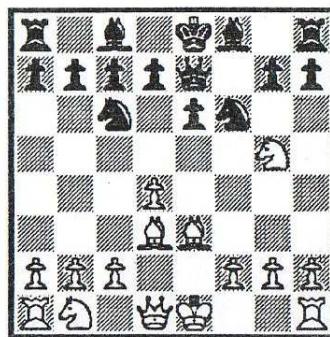

And to finish, a brevity from a silly opening.

1.Nf3 f5 2.e4 fxe4 3.Ng5 Nf6 4.d3 e3

This looks like panic - give the pawn back and hope that the resultant position is merely inferior rather than lost. In fact it is known to theory but should be followed up with 5. ... e5. Keene points out that taking on d3 gives White a From Gambit with his Knight on g5. However a better defence anyway is probably 3. ... d5 and an early ... Qd6.

5.Bxe3 e6 6.d4 Nc6 7.Bd3 Qe7

White already has his pawn back with a better position. The rest is just a trail of blood and internal organs. Can you imagine a game between two 1700s being concluded so decisively from, for instance, a Nimzo-Indian?

8.Bxh7 Qb4+ 9.Nd2 Ne7 10.Bd3 d5
11.O-O Qd6 12.Ndf3 Ng4 13.g3 e5

17.Qe1 Ng6 18.Nh2 Nxe5 19.Nxg4
